RE: ForestryWorksforBC

Dear Mayor Douglas and North Cowichan Council Members,

We are writing to local governments across British Columbia to introduce the ForestryWorksforBC campaign, a new grassroots initiative to raise awareness about the critical role forestry plays in the well-being of rural and urban communities.

ForestryWorksforBC is a group of forest-based organizations and companies, representing more than 1,000 businesses engaged in all aspects of British Columbia's forestry sector. We are proud to stand up for tens of thousands of workers and their families who are concerned about the future of forestry in British Columbia. This campaign includes the voices of regular British Columbians who have sent letters to provincial leaders sharing their personal stories, as well as a range of other organizations and companies that have played a part in building British Columbia's forest sector. We believe that a better and brighter future in this province needs a strong forest sector.

Forestry matters in every corner of BC. From hospitals to schools, roads, and communities, forestry has been the foundation of all that we hold dear in this province. Forestry is a renewable sector – and it has been a thriving sector while harvesting just a fraction of one percent of the forest land base each year. But the future of forestry in BC is uncertain.

Harvest levels have dropped by 42% since 2018 and half of BC's mills have been lost in the last two decades. Today, harvest levels have fallen to less than 60% of the sustainable allowable annual cut (AAC) set by the province's chief forester.

When access to the AAC is unreliable, harvest levels drop, government revenues for critical services decline, and the impact reaches every British Columbian. Here are a few quotes from voices across the province:

- “I don't see a future in my industry in BC... It kills me to leave this province as my family all live here. My wife is a nurse... her hospital is severely understaffed and will cry to see another hole to fill.”
- “As businesses disappear, so do the jobs and many small communities have nothing to replace them with. The communities themselves become unstable.”

- “I am 24 years old... I used to think this was a career I could cherish but I can no longer see myself pursuing a lifelong career in forestry.”
- “Our province is losing some of its most productive workers, successful contractors, and essential investment dollars every day.”

Through the ForestryWorksforBC campaign, people are rallying their voices to let our provincial leaders know these impacts are too much and that, without reliable and timely access to the AAC, we have a lot more to lose than mills.

The momentum is growing in communities. Mayor Kermit Dahl of Campbell River raised concerns in a public letter to the minister for forests; the Kamloops council has recognized a critical need to support forestry through a forestry-focused resolution submitted the Union of BC Municipalities convention this fall; and Lheidli T'enneh Chief Dollen Logan and George Lampreau, chief of the Simpcw First Nation near Barriere were joined by the mayors of McBride, Prince George, and Valemount to voice their concern over the crisis in the forest sector.

We ask that you include a discussion of this important topic on your next council agenda and consider joining other communities in sending a letter to provincial representatives to let them know that ForestryWorks for your community too. The Future of BC Forestry is Uncertain

The allowable annual cut (AAC) in BC is 1/3 of one percent of all the forest land in the province

...but...government-issued cutting permits have slowed

...and now...harvest levels are less than 60% of the sustainable AAC.

New Initiative Calls on British Columbians to Stand Up For Forestry

VANCOUVER, British Columbia, June 3, 2024 – A new grassroots initiative is encouraging British Columbians to be better informed on B.C.'s forest sector and take action through various activities including online letters and informing local governments to raise the importance of forestry to British Columbians.

Across the province, small, medium and large forest companies, family-owned enterprises and local businesses have joined forces through ForestryWorksForBC, a new grassroots initiative to address the sectors' uncertain future and its impact on British Columbians and communities that rely on the revenues from forestry to support critical services like roads, schools, and health care.

“Forestry matters in every corner of B.C., from hospitals, schools and roads and communities; forest jobs and forest revenues have been the foundation of all that we hold dear in this province,” said Bob Brash, executive director of the Truck Loggers Association. “Ensuring reliable and timely access to the allowable annual cut (AAC) means we can build affordable, climate-friendly homes for British Columbians; and we can keep people in their homes and communities with good paying jobs.”

In the last 20 years nearly half of all B.C. sawmills have closed. Some of this is the result of natural forces like wildfire and mountain pine beetle but increasing policy changes and escalating complexity have created instability and reduced cutting permits and investment. Today harvest levels are less than 60 per of the AAC set by the Province's chief forester.

Dean Garofano, president and chief operating officer at Delta Forestry Group, has been conducting crew talks across the company and hanging posters around the mill to build momentum for the campaign. “Our workers see the lack of logs coming in, and they are concerned about the future not just for themselves but the communities they call home,” said Garofano. “This initiative gives everyone who cares about forestry and the future of this province a voice – when BC's forest sector does well, we all do better.”
