

NORTH COWICHAN / DUNCAN CORRIDOR

SAFER COMMUNITY PLAN

WHAT WE HEARD REPORT

September 2024

Background

The corridor is an urban area generally described as a few blocks on either side of the Trans Canada Highway through Duncan and North Cowichan. In recent years this area has become impacted by public disorder, most of which is a downstream effect of poverty, addiction, mental health issues, and homelessness. In 2019, the Municipality of North Cowichan, the City of Duncan, and Cowichan Tribes, worked together to create a Safer Community Plan that outlined actions that responded to this public disorder, including enhanced bylaw, police, and security patrols and enforcement.

At a January 23, 2024 joint council meeting of North Cowichan and the City of Duncan, the respective Councils directed staff to review the 2019 Safer Community Plan to determine whether revising or updating the plan was required. In February and March, staff reviewed the plan with stakeholders, including North Cowichan and City of Duncan bylaw staff, the Safer Working Group, Cowichan Tribes Public Safety Working Group, the Cowichan Homelessness and Housing Coalition, the Wellness and Recovery Community Health and Safety, the South Cowichan Community Policing Society, and the North Cowichan-Duncan RCMP.

All stakeholders agreed that the 2019 Safer Community Plan had been largely completed and that they were open to participating in the creation of a new plan that provides clear, pragmatic, and effective direction going forward. Additionally, it was apparent that the development of a new plan would benefit from feedback from the people and business owners who live and work in the corridor area – those most impacted by public disorder.

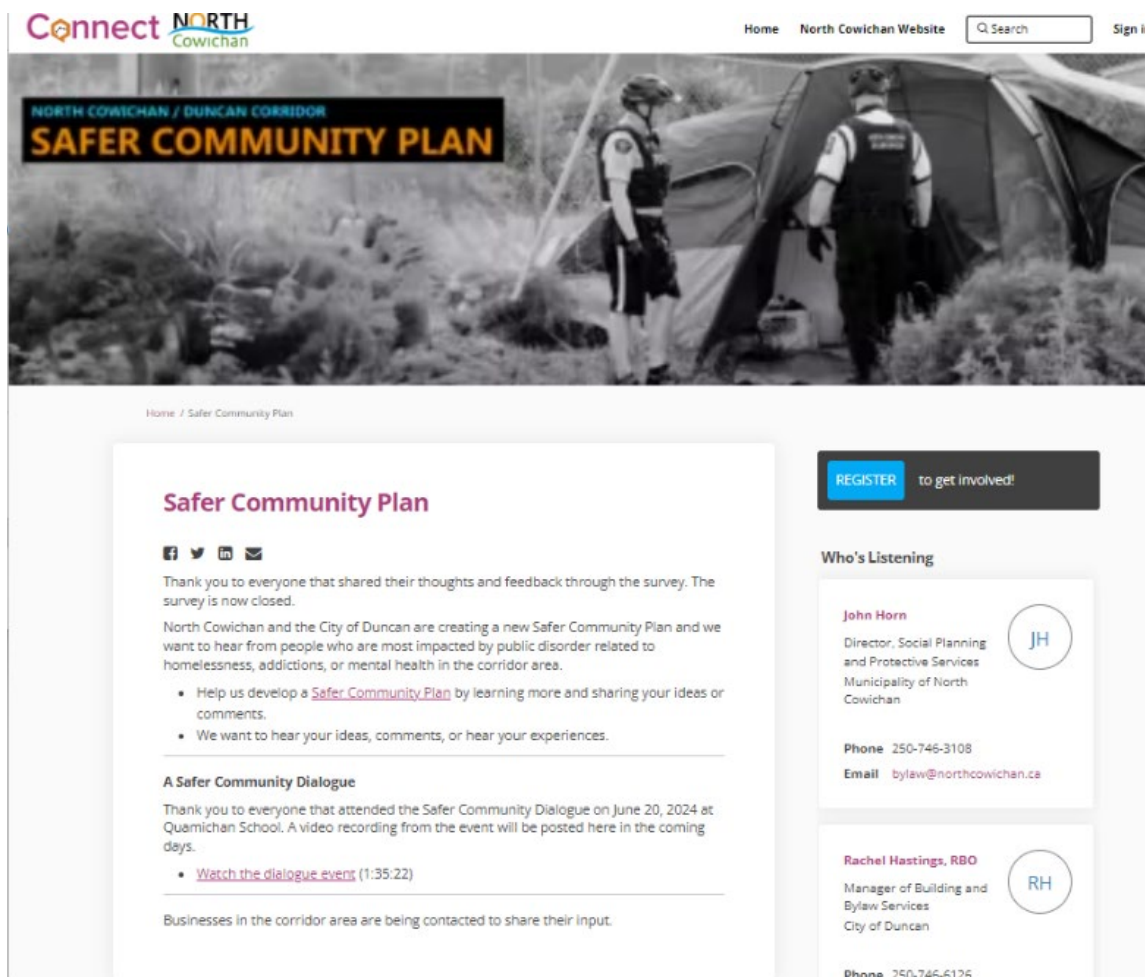

“It seems that when we speak of “public disorder” these days we are talking about people who are openly struggling because there’s nowhere to go.”

What we did

An engagement plan was developed that included the following objectives:

- To inform community members about the work already underway, community actions, and areas of jurisdictional influence.
- To involve those most impacted by public disorder in the review and refinement of a new plan, and updated actions.
- Design engagement opportunities to hear from a diverse range of audiences and stakeholders.
- Ensure stakeholder and community members feel as though their feedback was heard, understood, and taken into consideration as part of a new Safer Community Plan.

A project page was launched on ConnectNorthCowichan.ca containing information about the project, background documents and materials, information about engagement activities, a survey, and a Q&A forum.

The screenshot shows the website interface for the Safer Community Plan. At the top, there is a navigation bar with the logo 'Connect NORTH Cowichan', a search bar, and links for 'Home' and 'North Cowichan Website'. The main banner features a photograph of two police officers in tactical gear standing near a tent in a field, with the text 'NORTH COWICHAN / DUNCAN CORRIDOR SAFER COMMUNITY PLAN' overlaid. Below the banner, the page title is 'Home / Safer Community Plan'. The main content area is titled 'Safer Community Plan' and includes social media icons, a thank-you message for survey feedback, and information about the new Safer Community Plan. A 'REGISTER to get involved!' button is prominently displayed. The 'Who's Listening' section lists John Horn, Director of Social Planning and Protective Services, and Rachel Hastings, RBO, Manager of Building and Bylaw Services. Contact information for both is provided.

Safer Community Dialogue event: On

Thursday, June 20 from 6-7:30pm staff hosted a Safer Community Dialogue event at Quamichan School. The event included panelists representing the City of Duncan bylaws department, Vancouver Island Health Authority, Mental Health and Substance Use team, Look Out Health and Housing Society, RCMP - Cowichan Detachment, Corridor Enforcement Unit, and North Cowichan Protective Services department and was led by emcee Bob Day, former Mayor of Lake Cowichan.

Those most impacted by public disorder who live and/or work in the corridor area were invited to the dialogue event and after a round of remarks from the panel, participants could ask questions. A total of 60 people attended the event.

“As a wealthy country and region we should have all the supports and services to help people who are struggling, not put bandaids on the symptoms and let people live on the sidewalks.”

Discussions with businesses: Staff (John Horn, Director, Social Planning and Protective Services, Bylaw staff from North Cowichan and City of Duncan) spent considerable time in the corridor area visiting businesses and speaking with people. All business entities facing on to the Trans Canada Highway between Somenos marsh and the silver bridge were invited to attend the community dialogue event on June 20, North Cowichan staff attended at each business location to extend the invite and / or to leave a written invitation.

In addition, 17 business entities were interviewed using a simple dialogue script that asked three questions that prompted discussion:

1. Tell us about your experience of safety related to this site and public disorder
2. What could we collectively do to improve the situation
3. What would you like to see included in a plan to enhance safety in this area

Stakeholder discussions: A number of organizations and groups whose work or purpose intersects with people in the corridor area were engaged through meetings and updates.

“Do not feel safe walking the streets of the community I grew up in and went to school in.”

Survey: A survey was open to the public from June 18 to September 2. The purpose of the survey was to learn what the top issues related to public disorder were and what solutions could be considered to counter these issues. There was an open text box for participants to share their experiences related to public safety. Demographic questions asked where people lived or worked in relation to the corridor and their housing situation. The survey was open to anyone. A total of 398 responses were received. A summary of the responses are contained in Appendix A.

Q&A forum: A total of four questions were answered in the forum at ConnectNorthCowichan.ca

How we connected

The opportunities to provide input was shared with the public via:

- ConnectNorthCowichan project page
- A postcard mailed to addresses within the corridor area
- Emails to registered Connect participants and the News+Updates subscriber list
- A flyer handout
- Social media posts reaching:
 - June 18 – 8,249
 - August 28 – 8,984

The Connect North Cowichan page received more than 1,200 visitors during the open engagement period.

See Appendix B for examples of these.

*“I have experienced issues related to public intoxication.
Encountering individuals under the influence can be unsettling
as its difficult to predict their behaviour.”*

What we heard

"My mother lives on Beverly street since 1993 and she does not feel safe walking to McDonalds anymore to have a cup of coffee."

Safer Community Dialogue event: More than 60 people attended the June 20 event. People took turns at the microphone sharing their experiences and asking the panel members questions. The experiences and questions ranged from the negative impacts of public disorder, questions about public health and enforcement policies, and positive stories of community, support, and recovery.

Survey: A total of 398 surveys were completed between June 18 and September 2. In order to reduce barriers to participation, survey participants did not need to register on the site. As participants elected to take the survey, responses do not reflect a random sample.

"I see a lot of unhoused people around town, I've never had a negative experience with them but it's heartbreaking to see so many people with nowhere to go, and it's frustrating that a lot of community members seem to just want them out of site, yet dislike a lot of options."

Four questions asked about their felt level of safety in the corridor, what the main problems are, what possible solutions should be considered, and an open text space to share their experiences.

Question 1: Do you feel safe at home or at work (within the corridor area)?

- 47.8% feel safe always (56) or sometimes (128) and 52.2% feel safe occasionally (92) or never (109).

Question 2: What, in your opinion, do you feel are the main problems in the corridor area?
(pick 4)

The options were presented in a random order for each participant.

The top four issues identified were:

- Uncontrolled addictions or untreated mental health issues (282)
- Open substance use (182)
- Property and personal crimes (170)
- Lack of treatment (152)

A total of 20 people chose 'Other' and they were invited to specify. These responses are summarized into seven general themes:

- General disorder and vagrancy
- Drug use and paraphernalia
- Mental health and addictions
- Crime and safety concerns
- Policing and enforcement
- Public health and sanitation
- Government and policy failures

Question 3: What, in your opinion, do you feel are the best ways toward solutions?

The options were presented in a random order for each participant. The list of solutions included, in brackets, the agency or level of government responsible for that service.

The top four solutions identified were:

- Easier access to mental health care (more spaces, no wait times, close by) (250)
- Easier access to addictions treatment (more spaces, no wait times, close by) (249)
- More enforcement (198)
- More supported and low-income housing (128)

A total of 85 people chose 'Something else' and were asked to specify a solution or solutions. These responses can be summarized in seven themes:

- Rehabilitation and treatment
- Criminal justice and law enforcement
- Housing solutions
- Public safety and sanitation improvements
- Drug policy reform
- Mental health care
- Community and social supports

Question 4: Tell us about your experiences with public disorder

This question invited participants to share their stories, experiences, observations, reflections, and ideas as they related to public disorder in the corridor area. A total of 315 participants used this space.

These responses were summarized and grouped into eight general themes:

- Open drug use and addiction
 - A significant number of responses describe widespread drug use in public spaces, with individuals witnessing open drug consumption (heroin, meth, crack) and its associated paraphernalia (needles, pipes).
 - The impact on children, such as seeing people using drugs and asking questions about it, is highlighted.
 - Many respondents report frustration over the availability of "safe drugs" and the perceived lack of consequences for those using drugs openly.
- Homelessness and encampments:
 - Many mention the presence of homeless camps in public areas, particularly near schools and playgrounds.
 - Respondents describe feelings of unsafety when encountering encampments, especially in residential and commercial areas.
 - There are multiple references to trespassing, garbage, and human waste in areas surrounding encampments.
- Public safety concerns and crime:
 - Several respondents report experiencing or witnessing violent behavior, theft, vandalism, and aggressive panhandling.
 - Some describe being followed, threatened, or having property damaged by people under the influence of drugs or experiencing mental health crises.
 - Many respondents express fear for their safety when walking in certain areas, especially at night, and share concerns about the safety of children.
- Impact on local businesses and property:

- Business owners and employees frequently mention theft, property damage, and disruptive behavior by individuals struggling with homelessness and addiction.
- Some report having to install security measures like fences, cameras, or gates to protect their property.
- Public health and cleanliness:
 - Litter, including drug paraphernalia, human waste, and garbage, is frequently mentioned.
 - Many express concerns about the sanitary conditions in public spaces, parks, and sidewalks, with some mentioning specific locations like McDonald's, Beverly Street, and York Street.
- Mental health and addiction services:
 - Respondents discuss the lack of adequate mental health and addiction support services.
 - Several mention that current interventions, such as safe injection sites and free drugs, are enabling rather than rehabilitating individuals.
 - There are calls for more treatment centers, long-term housing solutions, and mental health care facilities.
- Impact on children:
 - Many responses highlight concerns about children being exposed to drug use, violence, and inappropriate behavior (e.g., nudity, public defecation).
 - Respondents frequently describe children witnessing disturbing events on their way to school or in public parks.
- Enforcement and government action:
 - Numerous comments reflect dissatisfaction with the government's handling of the situation, specifically citing a lack of law enforcement, ineffective bylaws, and frustration with the "catch and release" approach.
 - Several respondents call for more policing, stricter laws, and tougher consequences for public disorder offenses.

Who we heard from

The final survey questions asked where they lived and about their living arrangement. As participants elected to take the survey, responses do not reflect a random sample or represent the demographic makeup of the corridor area.

Question 5: I live and or work:

Participants were asked where they lived and/or worked (in relation to the corridor area).

- In the corridor area – 142
- Near the corridor area – 158
- Elsewhere in the Cowichan Valley – 136
- Not in the Cowichan Valley – 2

Question 6: I live:

Participants were asked to share their living situation.

- In a secure place I own – 300 (75.6%)
- In a secure place I rent – 66 (16.6%)
- I am currently housed, but could be unhoused at any time – 24 (6%)
- I do not have a home – 4 (1%)
- I do not have a permanent address or place I call home – 2 (0.5%)
- I live in a car or RV – 4 (1.0%)
- I live in a facility or assisted/supportive building - 0

Interviews with businesses

Comments heard from the 17 business entities interviewed identified several issues including:

- public urination
- graffiti
- open fires
- open substance use
- overnight camping
- litter and discarded items
- vandalism
- sleepers on the site
- overdose events
- a perceived lack of safety for staff and customers.

Next steps

This report outlining what was heard will be shared for information with North Cowichan Council, City of Duncan Council, Cowichan Tribes Council, and the Cowichan Valley Regional District Board. It will also be shared with the stakeholders, partners, and community organizations that were consulted earlier in 2024.

This report will also be made available to the general public. It will be added to the Connect North Cowichan project page and people who chose to follow the project will be emailed advising them that the report is available and the next steps.

Ultimately, what was heard and shared during this engagement will inform a new Safer Community Plan that will be developed by the Municipality of North Cowichan, the City of Duncan, and Cowichan Tribes.
